- Load a sample signal (Viewing Dr.Harish Patankar's ...)
- Identify best column (Manual inspection)
- Take signal from the best column identified
- Peak detection
- Foot detection
- Loop over each pulse cycle, for each cycle obtain features. For N-cycle and M features, obtain N*M feature matrix.
- Perform K-means clustering and obtain maximum of 5 cluster.
- Identify the cluster with largest number of pulse cycle
- Identify that pulse cycle, which is close to centroid of the cluster

On the right side of the slide, there are several plots:

- A top plot showing a signal waveform with a highlighted column.
- A middle plot showing a zoomed-in view of a pulse cycle.
- A bottom section containing six smaller plots, each labeled 'Model 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, % of cycle 0.1716', showing different signal features or clusters.

Report on "Science of Happiness"

Faculty Motivation Program

Goal: To explore the Art of Living and finding Inner Peace.

The Webinar was organized by Dept of E&TC Engineering; JSCOE. Faculty from various Engineering and Diploma College across Maharashtra joined the Webinar along with Students. A total of 90 plus Faculty and students registration has been recorded for the event.

The Webinar was organized under the guidance of Head of the Department Dr. C. A. Manjare. The overall coordination for this event was done by Prof. T.S.Zende along with Prof. Varsha Patil.

Dr. A. A. Dandavate madam started the Webinar by the saying "Happiness is Virtue" She elaborated the Webinar title under two important terminologies i.e. "Science and Happiness". Science is knowledge and Happiness is a remaining happy or well being. She mentioned Happiness is a natural state and it must sustain life long. She mentioned that materialistic things should not be the only reason for our happiness. A proper control over our emotions and feelings will always remain the key to our happiness.

International Day of Happiness which is celebrated every year on 20th March. Science to happiness lies in our ability to establish a healthy connection with others, to have a meaningful relationship and in achieving what we want. The phrase "the science of happiness" came into existence with the evolution of psychology. Dr. Martin Seligman and Dr. Mihaly Csikszentmihalyi are the key co-founders of this concept.

Outcome:

"Happiness is not something you postpone for the future; it is something you design for the present". Also
"Happiness is to enjoy the present without anxious dependence of the future"
